Ice Powers and Dragons

by Guardian Dragon Scarlet

Category: Frozen, How to Train Your Dragon
Genre: Adventure
Language: English
Characters: Astrid, Elsa, Hiccup, Toothless
Status: In-Progress
Published: 2015-06-18 01:15:50
Updated: 2015-09-03 06:15:54
Packaged: 2016-04-27 08:42:18
Rating: K+
Chapters: 8
Words: 11,673
Publisher: www.fanfiction.net
Summary: This story takes place before Hiccup even builds Toothless' tail. Him and Astrid have had the same dreams and soon are struck down by orbs of light that scream their names before they strike them.

1. Chapter 1

This story takes place before vikings become friends with dragons. Hiccup and Astrid have been dreaming about a queen who's able to freeze things at will. Please read and review.

* * *

>Hiccup was troubled by his dream the night before. He wasn't paying attention to Gobbers story of how he lost his arm and leg. But he did perk up when Astrid tlaked about her dreams the night before.

"It was a girl," Astrid said, "She was singing but I can't remember what she was singing."

"Let it go," Hiccup said, everyone but Astrid laughed.

"Yes, that's it," Astrid said surprised, everyone quit laughing, "How did you know."

"I had the same dream," Hiccup said, "She had ice powers and built a castle of ice."

"Yes," Astrid said excitedly, "She changed her dress to a blue one."

"Yes, that's the dream," Hiccup said standing up.

"We've had the same dream about that same person this has to mean something," Astrid said standing up quickly.

"Talk about it later," Gobber said, "For now get to bed. You'll need your rest for tomorrow."

Everyone filed out but Hiccup and Astrid. Snotlout stopped.

"If you lay a finger on Astrid I kill you," Snotlout said angrily.

Astrid rolled her eyes. Snotlout was pushed from behind my Fishlegs.

"Hey watch it," Snotlout said.

"Sorry," Fishlegs said, "I want to get home I'm tired."

As soon as the last person left. Hiccup and Astrid talked for a while.

"So," Astrid said, "You had the same dream."

"Yes," Hiccup, "All the girl had to do was trow her hand and snow and ice came out."

"Yeah," Astrid said excitedly, "I think she was a queen or princess, she wore a crown."

"Yes," Hiccup said, "A gold one with a blue gem in the center."

"Yes," Astrid said excitedly.

"Well I should get some rest," Hiccup said getting up.

"Yeah," Astrid said standing up, "Oh, don't mind Snotlout."

"He acts like your boyfriend," Hiccup said looking down.

"He's not," Astrid said, "I'm waiting for they right guy and it's not him."

"How do you know," Hiccup asked.

"He's too self centered," Astrid said, "I want someone whose down to Earth and sweet. Not someone who acts all tough."

"Like Fishlegs," Hiccup asked starting down the stairs, Astrid followed.

"Oh no," Astrid said, "He's too much into the books. And don't get me started on Tuffnut."

"What's wrong with him," Hiccup asked.

"To be honest," Astrid said smiling, "He's dumb enough to marry his sister."

"True," Hiccup said laughing, "So that leaves me."

"Well I don't know," Astrid said.

"It's your opinion and you don't know," Hiccup said laughing.

"You really wanna know fine," Astrid said laughing, "You I'd actually consider going out with."

"Really," Hiccup said.

"The only reason you're here is because of your dad," Astrid said, "And you're not trying to be macho. You just want to better than the person you were before."

"Well thanks," Hiccup said flattered.

"Well I better get home," Astrid said turning away, "Later."

"Later," Hiccup said as she ran off.

He stood there for a few minutes, then started for home. Was he really the only one she would consider dating. He found home and walked inside. He was too tired to walk up the stairs so he decided to pass out on a bench in the main room. It was too warm for a blanket that night so he just lay down and passed out.

Astrid walked inside her home. She never gave what she said a second thought. It's not like any of them could hear what she said, they were home going to sleep. Astrid walked into her bedroom. She climbed into her bed and fell asleep.

"Does she really think that about us," Snotlout said the next morning at breakfast.

"That's what I heard her say to Hiccup," Tuffnut said angrily, "She even said I was dumb enough to marry my sister."

"What," Ruffnut exclaimed, "I thought she was our friend."

"I can't believe she betrayed me like that," Snotlout said sadly.

"Hey guys what's up," Astrid said walking in like nothing was wrong.

"You know what's up," Fishlegs said angrily, "Tuffnut what you said to Hiccup about us last night."

"What," Astrid said surprised, "I was just blowing off steam. I didn't mean any of it."

"That's why you said you'd go out with Hiccup before any of us," Snotlout said loudly, "You were the only girl I actually liked and then you go say that."

"So," Astrid said angrily, "I was mad."

"About what," Ruffnut said, "That there's no one like Hiccup," she said tauntingly.

"Hey it's not my fault you're all self centered little cry babies," Astrid shouted before running off in tears.

They let her run off, she wasn't their friend anymore. Astrid pushed passed Hiccup. He walked to his usual table and sat down. Hiccup thought it was odd but brushed it off. It wasn't his department to find out what was wrong.

"What you're not going to calm your girlfriend," Ruffnut said angrily.

"What," Hiccup said oblivious to the previous argument that took place.

"Tuffnut told us what Astrid said about us last night," Fishlegs said, "She said she was blowing off steam that little liar."

"Wait what," Hiccup said trying to piece it all together in his head.

"Just go before we have to kick you butt," Snotlout said.

Hiccup got the message and went to find Astrid. He searched for bout ten minutes when he found her sitting on a rock just outside the village crying.

* * *

>Well here's chapter one. Thanks for reading and please review.

2. Chapter 2

Here's chapter two. Please read and review. Enjoy.

* * *

>It's been a few days since Hiccup and Astrid became besties. Snotlout got over Astrid in that time and the rest of the group were proud of him.

"Way to go buddy," Tuffnut said excitedly.

"Yeah," Snotlout said, "Still depressed but not as bad."

"Don't look now," Ruffnut whispered as Hiccup and Astrid pranced past.

Astrid and Hiccup sat side by side, Astrid was blabbing on and on and Hiccup just nodded. Hiccup ate his food mindfully glaceing at the other table every once in a while.

"Take a picture it lasts longer," Snotlout shouted laughing along with the twins and Fishlegs.

"You're just jealous he won me over," Astrid shouted back.

"No I'm over you," Snotlout shot back.

"Remember I can make you death look like an accident," Hiccup said smiling.

"You wouldn't," Ruffnut shouted.

"Yes he would," Astrid shouted, "He made me that promise."

"Ha," Fishlegs shouted back.

Astrid and Hiccup kept quiet, they went to their eating.

"Got nothing to say Backstabber," Ruffnut shouted.

"No we just don;t wanna waste our breath," Hiccup said, "You're not worth it."

They shut up and Hiccup went back to his food. The screams were heard outside and no one made a move to the door. Astrid perked up, she heard them too. There they were again but closer. Hiccup looked at Astrid who got up and ran out the door. Hiccup shot up and followed. Fishlegs took note and got up to follow.

"What is it," Snotlout asked.

"It's just the way they got up and ran," Fishlegs said, "Like someone was calling for help."

Snotlout opened his mouth to speak when Astrid screamed out. They turned to the door then Hiccups scream sounded. Snotlout stood up.

"Stay here," Gobber said hobbling as fast as he could out the door, a second later he was back inside holding both of the teens.

"What happened," Ruffnut asked.

"We heard screams," Astrid said shivering even though it was pretty warm outside, "Then these balls of light," she choked out, "Hit us."

"They were white," Hiccup said his voice shacking, "They screamed our names when they hit us."

Astrid let out a small noise as she fell to the ground her hair turning white. The others looked ta her horrified.

"Um Astrid," Snotlout said, "You're getting old on us."

"What do you mean," Astrid asked.

"Your hair's turning white," Fishlegs said, "So Hiccups."

Hiccup looked as though he were an old man, hunched over himself and his hair a silvery white. Only he didn't have wrinkles. Gobber lead them to a fire where he sat them down. Astrid didn't want to sit, she wanted to lay down. Hiccup didn't want to let go of Gobber. Gobber sat there with the two teens while Snotlout and them left for home. They talked about the recent event.

"Do you think Gobber's going to tell Stoick," Ruffnut asked.

"Of course he will," Snotlout said, "Hiccup is Stoicks son."

"What do you think going to happen to them," asked Tuffnut.

"I think they will be fine," Fishlegs said, "Unless those balls of light," he paused, "You know."

"I don't think it was balls of light," Snotlout said, "They are just making it up."

"Snotlout's right," Ruffnut said, "Maybe the balls of light were magic."

"Magic don't exist," Snotlout said, "I wasn't suggesting magic. I was suggesting drugs."

"Then explain their hair and why they both saw the same thing," Tuffnut said angrily.

"It also explains why they had the same dream at the same time," Ruffnut said.

"But it's not logical," Fishlegs said, "I think they're pulling our strings."

"The hair," Ruffnut said loudly, "We're forgetting the hair."

"They could have done anything," Snotlout said as loud as Ruffnut spoke, "It could have been the way the light shined off their hair. It's an act."

"Tell me why they were shivering," Tuffnut shouted.

"They were acting," Snotlout said irritated.

"We'll find out tomorrow," Fishlegs said, "For now let's just go home and go to sleep."

"Fine," Snotlout said heading to the direction of his home, "See you tomorrow."

"Bye," Tuffnut said as he and his sister walked home, "Night."

"Night guys," Fishlegs said running home.

The rest of the night was uneventful. Other than the fact Hiccup and Astrid were discovering what the balls of light did other than turn their hair white.

"Oh no," Astrid said pacing about, "What am I gonna do," she said biting the side of her finger.

Hiccup was looking at his hands in fear, "We can't control this," he shouted frost growing about him.

"Being scared will only make it worse," Gobber said, "You must calm down," he approached Hiccup.

"Get away from me," Hiccup shouted, "Please I don't want to hurt anyone."

"Fine," Gobber said sitting away from them, "Who will I go to for help."

"Help," Astrid shouted, "Why would you take this to anyone but our parents."

"Even our parents," Hiccup said, "Who knows what my dad would do," he balled up and started to cry softly.

"Probably send you away," Gobber said, "Maybe into the woods or in the mountains on your own safety and the safety of Berk."

"Maybe," Astrid said, "But my parents would keep me in the village," she said sadly, "They wouldn't want me anywhere else."

"Oh you two are just letting the fear get to you," Gobber said, "If I were you two I'd be excited. Especially you Hiccup, now you have the chance to make that mark you've always wanted to make."

"I wouldn't make that kind of mark," Hiccup said wiping tears away, "I'd just get more people to hate me," he sobbed curling back into his ball.

"Well, I know where some gloves are you two can wear," Gobber said, "You can wear them until you get over the shock over your new talents."

"Get them," Astrid said, "We'll stay here. But please hurry."

"I will," Gobber said hobbling out the door.

Hiccup just cried to himself, Astrid sat next to him. Hiccup noticed her there and scooted closer letting her hug him. What were they gonna do, Stoick would most definitely send him away and Astrid would be locked up by her parents. There was no two ways around it. Gibber came back and Hiccup grabbed his pair and they were on faster than lighting. Astrid more mindfully put them on making sure no ice was visible. Gobber walked the teens to their homes. Stoick would be back the next day and Gobber knew Stoick would want to do something about it immediately. The only thing that was really left for them was each other.

* * *

>Here's chapter two. Hope you like it and if you are confused it takes place just before Stoick comes back from his trip and yes Toothless is in it and Astrid does know about him. Thanks for reading and please review.

3. Chapter 3

Here's chapter three. Please read and review. If you are confused the first chapter took place the first day of training the second the day before Stoick returns from his trip. Yes Toothless is in the story I just haven't talked about him yet.

* * *

>Hiccup woke up in the morning with Astrid right nest to him. He was shocked to find her there but then remembered what happened last night. The balls of light and the magic. He sat up and knocked his head on the bottom of a table. They were in the shop under the work desk. Astrid stirred a little bit. He walked to the window and pushed it open. No use going to the class today, he didn't want to trigger something horrible.

"What are you doing," Astrid asked, she was sitting up.

"Letting light in," Hiccup said, "I'm not going to class."

"Yeah Gobber locked the door remember," Astrid said smiling.

"Oh yeah," Hiccup frowned and looked at the door.

Big iron chains sat on the door keeping it shut, as if they wanted to leave. Hiccup sighed. Astrid lay down because there was nothing else to do except sleep, breath and take up space. Astrid noticed Hiccup walk into a smaller room at the back, she sat up.

"What are you doing," she asked.

"Trying to forget whose coming back today to send me away," Hiccup said sadly.

"I don't think you'll be going alone," Astrid said about ready to cry.

"Don't cry," Hiccup said hugging her, "Don't cry cause then I'll cry and we'll both be crying," he couldn't fight the tears any longer.

Meanwhile, Gobber opened up the gates for the rest of the teens.

"Where's Astrid and her boyfriend," Ruffnut snarled.

"Not joining us today," Gobber said walking passed them.

"What he get her pregnant," Tuffnut laughed.

"No it's about what happened last night," Gobber said, "I don't know what it was, all I know is those two won't quit freaking out about their new talents. But I can't blame them, I would too if that happened to me."

"New talents," Ruffnut said.

"What happened to them," Snotlout asked.

"I said too much," Gobber said shaking his head, "Just forget I said anything. But as soon as Stoick knows Hiccup will most definitely get sent away."

"So why does any of this concern us," Fishlegs asked.

"Ruffnut brought it up," Gobber said.

"Hey don't blame it on me," Ruffnut shouted.

"Get ready," Gobber said releasing the dragon.

The day dragged on. Hiccup and Astrid were crying into each others arms, the other teens were going about their business. Snotlotu noticed the window to the shop was open and Hiccup was sitting in it. A great idea came to mind.

"Watch this," Snotlout said picking up a rock.

He threw the rock as far as he could and it hit Hiccup in the back of the head. But instead of Hiccup turning around and yelling at them, he fell backwards and hit the ground with a loud thud.

"Snotlout," Fishlegs said scared, "I think you killed him."

"So," Snotlout said laughing to hide his fear, "No one will care, they'd thank me."

"Yeah who cares about him," Tuffnut laughed.

Ruffnut screamed real loud. The other teens turned toward the shop. Ice grew around the window and frosted everything in it's path. Hiccup was shouting but only Astrid could hear.

"Astrid you're glove," Hiccup shouted at the top of his lungs.

"I didn't know it was ripped," Astrid pleaded.

"I'll find another one," Hiccup said pulling the drawer holding the smallest work gloves open and throwing a pair to Astrid.

Astrid pulled her old ones off and put the new ones on. The ice quit growing and even began to melt. Astrid calmed down considerably.

"Hey you wanna escape," Astrid asked to lighten the mood even though she wanted to stay there forever.

"Why not," Hiccup said reluctantly.

Neither one of them made a move to the door or the window. There was a loud clang as the chains fell to the floor. Stoick walked in to check over the two teens and Gobber hobbled not too far behind.

"Now what's going on," Stoick asked.

"These two got icy powers," Gobber said stepping behind the teens.

"I know where you must go," Stoick said grimly.

"To a deserted island," Hiccup said sadly.

"No," Stoick said smiling a bit.

"Then where," Astrid said, "Raven Point."

"Well I was thinking more the mountain but that works too," Stoick said looking at his son.

Hiccup looked as though he were about to start crying. Stoick hugged him.

"You'll be fine," Stoick said, "I'll come see you as mush as I can."

"But why do we get sent away," Hiccup said sadly, "I know we're a danger but I don't wanna get sent away."

"I know but this is for the best," Stoick said, "I'll even block that area off."

"He's right Hiccup," Gobber said, "You won't want to hurt anyone don't you."

"I guess so," Hiccup said.

"When do we leave," Astrid asked.

"Tonight after the sun has gone down," Stoick said, "I'll give me time to get Astrid's parent to agree."

"But a boy and girl living alone together," Hiccup said shaking his head, "People will get the wrong idea."

"Not if they don't know," Stoick said, "That's why we do it tonight."

"I'm in," Astrid said, "I guess."

"Me too," Hiccup said sadly.

"It won't be forever," Stoick said, "Just long enough for you two to learn to control your powers."

There was a long awkward pause. Gobber broke the silence.

"Shouldn't you go talk to Astrid's parents Stoick," Gobber said.

"Right," Stoick said about ready to leave, "Whatever helps you two I will allow."

"OK," Astrid said awkwardly, "If you say so."

Gobber and Stoick left the teens to their own devices. Hiccup turned to Astrid with a look of excitement. No one would be able to hurt Toothless as long as he helped Hiccup. Astrid started smiling too, Toothless was the best thing ever in her life so far. Astrid knew her parents wouldn't want to at first, but with a little encouragement they'd go for anything.

"I'm so excited," Hiccup said, "Dad can know about Toothless and no one gets hurt because it benefits me which benefits Berk."

"I know," Astrid said, "He helps me out too," she squealed, "I'm so excited."

"Me too," Hiccup said

"I so hope my parents say yes," Astrid said smiling like never before.

Meanwhile, Stoick tried to convince Astrids Parents to let her go with Hiccup.

"I prefer she stayed," Astrids mother said shaking her head.

"It would be more beneficial to Berk if she left with Hiccup," Stoick said, "If she triggers anything how do you think Berk will respond to her. They'd kill her."

Astrids father spoke up, "I think it's best dear," he said grimly, "What choice do we have. It's not only her we have to think about here, we have to think about Berk also," she turned away, "I know it'll be hard to see her go but it's for the best."

"Fine," Astrids mother said, "Let me just see her one more time."

"You'll be able to see her any time you want," Stoick said standing up from his seat, "She'll be fine."

Later, Hiccup and Astrid said goodbye to the village and hello to their new home at Raven Point. They insisted on going alone. The farther from the village they got the more free they felt. The more free they were to use their powers and the more free they were from fear.

"I'll never be afraid again," Hiccup shouted at the top of his lungs.

"No more people around to worry about," Astrid happily.

"Come on," Hiccup said running ahead.

Astrid threw her gloves as far as she could away from her before following. Little did she know, they landed on Snotlout. Snotlout looked the way the gloves came and saw Astrid running not too far behind Hiccup. Snotlout grew puzzled, and began to follow.

* * *

>What will Snotlout do once he sees what was being hidden from him? Thanks for reading and please review.

4. Chapter 4

Here's chapter four enjoy. Please read and review. Sorry it took so long I had nothing to add.

* * *

>Snotlout followed the two through the woods. He stayed back a distance so they wouldn't notice him. Snotlout had a hard time keeping up even though he was much faster than both of them, he almost lost them a few times. Hiccup and Astrid rounded a curve behind a rock and Snotlout turned to follow. He looked around, they were no where in sight. He grabbed his knees to catch his breath. After taking a few heavy breaths, he left for home. No use finding them, they're long gone.

Hiccups feet barely touched the sides of the alcove. Toothless stood at alert when his riders came bounding up to him.

"We get to live here bud," Hiccup said rubbing the dragons neck, "And possibly keep you."

"You're OK now," Astrid said, "You help us."

Toothless gave a confused purr. Hiccup and Astrid laughed.

"You help us not to be so scared of this bud," Hiccup said throwing his hand in the air making it snow.

Toothless looked around as snow fell down and landed softly on the ground. Toothless never seen snow so white and magical. Hiccup remembered that they would be staying in a small shack near this area. He began to look around frantically for the shack his father and Gobber built. He looked across the lake and found it. It was nothing fancy just something to keep the rain and wind out. It was no bigger than a three room home with a small front door big enough for just the two teens. How they never came across Toothless was a complete miracle on its own.

"Hey Astrid over here," Hiccup said running to the house.

"Wait for me Hiccup," Astrid laughed chasing him. Hiccup burst through the front door to find a few swords on the wall and and a fire pit in the middle of the front room. Wooden benches sat around the pit and a pot sat in the middle of the pit.

"Where's my room," Astrid said looking frantically around the house.

"Go see which one has your bedding I guess," Hiccup said just to give her an answer.

Astrid ran past and burst into the first room on the right side. She stopped and gasped. Hiccup went to go see what was going on. Toothless wasn't too far behind Hiccup. Hiccup looked over Astrids shoulder to see a small toy girl with a gnarly set of white teeth sitting on the bed. Hiccup screeched in excitement.

"Smiles," Hiccup shouted and ran up to the toy and snatched it up, "Oh Smiles I though daddy threw you away," He sat on the bed hugging it as hard as he could.

"I think Scary Teeth or Possessed Baby would have been a better name choice," Astrid said staring the doll down.

"Hey I was five years old when I got it," Hiccup said in the toys defense.

"Wait, your dad _gave_ that to you," Astrid said surprised.

"No," Hiccup said, "I bought it myself. Dad wouldn't let me near the shelf it was on but as soon as I saw Smiles I had to have her. So I took all the money I could find and bought it."

"Your dad let you buy it," Astrid said.

"No I bought it when he wasn't looking," Hiccup said laughing, "Guy behind the counter couldn't believe that a five year old boy was buying a very creepy doll."

"Okay then," Astrid said, "Maybe that's why no one ever liked you."

"Please Astrid," Hiccup said standing up, "I'm pretty sure Smiles isn't the reason I was always kept inside," his tone became more serious, "I think i was kept inside because of what happened to my mom. At my first screw up dad took that opportunity to keep me inside so what happened to my mom wouldn't happen to me."

"Really," Astrid said, "You don't think it's about you being so bad at it."

"Well yeah," Hiccup said, "You guys were out there before you were even potty trained, I wasn't."

"Really," Astrid said, "I never noticed."

"Yeah," Hiccup said laying down, "My mom was taken not too long before I was able to walk, it was still fresh in his head. I mean, I'd do the same thing."

"Yeah me too," Astrid said.

"I was always the last to do anything," Hiccup said, "But whenever something horrible happened I was always the first to be blamed."

"I know how that feels," Astrid said sitting next to him, "You know those guys I was only telling the truth."

"Yeah," Hiccup said, "If said that to anyone they'd agree except the part about me."

"Because no one knows what I want," Astrid said, "I want someone who chooses me over making themselves look good."

"The why me," Hiccup said, "I'm always finding ways to make me better."

"Because you just want to get out and fly Toothless," Astrid said, "You're not doing what you do to be the best, you just want what comes after the classes."

"Pretty much," Hiccup agreed laughing.

Astrid laughed too, "I'm off to my room," Astrid said leaving.

"Night," Hiccup said laying down.

"Um, night I guess," Astrid said walking into her room.

The two slept soundly. Toothless choose to sleep at Hiccups feet to protect him in case Smiles decided to come to life and kill someone. Astrid dreamed about the queen again, and this time she got a name.

5. Chapter 5

Here's chapter five Please read and review and enjoy.

* * *

>Elsa. The queens name was Elsa. Astrid woke up, maybe Hiccup had the same dream. She ran to Hiccups room and banged on the door excitedly.

"I'm not in there," Hiccup shouted from the living room.

"Dreamed about the queen again did you," Astrid asked running into the living room.

"No," Hiccup said, "I dreamed about you pushing me into an icy pit."

"Well any I got the queens name," Astrid said, "It's Elsa."

"Elsa," Hiccup said, "Anyway, back to my dream. You whispered 'I love you' in my ear and pushed me into an icy pit."

"Strange," Astrid said, "I'd never push you into anything you're my only friend other than Toothless."

"And that's not the only weird part," Hiccup sat at the table, "Snotlout, Fishlegs, and the twins were there telling you to do it."

"Again why would I do it," Astrid said sitting across from him.

Stoick walked in and the teens threw a few shards of ice at him. Stoick ducked barley missing the lowest shard. The teens ran over as soon as they realized who it was.

"Sorry dad," Hiccup said helping his father to his feet.

"Like we need more to worry about," Astrid whined.

"I just came to tell you Astrid's parents will be over with a bit of food," Stoick said fixing his helmet, "I told them I'll bring a few animals later on."

"Cool," Astrid said, "I miss my parents like crazy."

"I bet you do," Stoick said, "They miss you too Astrid. They were following me all this morning asking when they would get to come see you."

"Yeah," Astrid said starting to cry, "I want to see them."

Hiccup hugged her while she cried in his sleeve, like he did when her 'friends' dumped her because of what she had said about them. She seemed more emotional since then. When she was friends with the others she was emotionless, now she cries over a dead bird she accidentally killed. Stoick cleared his throat letting the two know they held each other long enough.

"Hey dad," Hiccup said, "You said you would allow anything as long as it helped us right."

"Yes," Stoick said.

"Even if it's a dragon," Hiccup asked afraid of the response.

"Maybe why," Stoick asked suspiciously.

"Well," Hiccup said stepping back a bit, "Toothless," He called reluctantly.

Toothless bounded out of Hiccups room like a lamb. He had Smiles in his mouth and seemed really happy. Toothless put the doll by Hiccups feet and looked up at him as if to say 'I brought your dolly, give me fish.' Hiccup rubbed Toothless's neck and Toothless rolled unto his back. Astrid rubbed the dragons stomach and Toothless let out a howl of approval.

"I'll allow it," Stoick said, "But only fly at night so no one sees you. I can't believe I'm allowing a dragon to stay on Berk as a pet."

"Hey," Hiccup said in the dragons defense, "You said as long as it helps you'll allow it."

"I know," Stoick said, "I just never thought a dragon."

"Let me and Hiccup tell my parents," Astrid said.

"I know something you can eat but I don't think our parents will allow it and you can't chew or swallow," Hiccup said looking to the ceiling trying to keep a straight face.

Astrid punched his arm so hard ice spilled out of his arm, "Gross pig," she said.

"I'll take that as my que to go," Stoick said leaving, "Promise only night flying."

"Promise," Hiccup breathed for he was still laughing.

"Laugh it up," Astrid said walking to her room, "Just make sure my parents bring us food."

"You've got the whole alcove to yourself." Stoick said before leaving, "I'll have to think of something to keep people away. Oh and Hiccup, how did you keep Toothless hidden when the house was built."

"I took him to the beach and hid him in a cave," Hiccup said smiling at what he did.

"Oh okay," Stoick said, "I'll have Astrid's parents bring you guys some food until we get the animals here."

"Okay dad," Hiccup said.

Stoick left and Hiccup stood at the window watching his dad walk up the wooden staircase that was built to the top of the alcove. He heard Astrid snore softly from her room, Toothless purred at the toy on the floor. Hiccup broke his gaze from the window and picked up the toy. Hiccup sneezed. Stupid allergies. He took a notebook from a box under a table against the wall and went outside. He sat on a rock by the lake and looked at his new home. He could see Astrid in her bed through her window. He could see in his room and the fact he never made his bed after he got up. Toothless was sitting by the lake watching the fish and stuck his under the water to try to catch one. He failed and looked at Hiccup sadly who was paying no attention to what was going on around him.

Hiccup was starting to cry. Toothless went over to Hiccup and nuzzled his nose and knocked Hiccup over. Hiccup looked at Toothless puffy eyed and sat up.

"Bud why did this have to happen," Hiccup sobbed into the dragons scales.

Toothless hugged Hiccup. When he let go he gave Hiccup a look that said 'Okay, I made you fell better. Give me fish.'

"You ate all the fish last night," Hiccup said apologetically with a smile, "And I don't have anything to catch fish with."

Hiccup looked at the sky. It was mostly clear except for a few clouds, but mostly clear. A few birds flew by over head and Hiccups gaze followed them to the edge of the alcove. Hiccup drew what was around him. The sunrise, Toothless playing in the grass, a bumble bee buzzing by. Astrid yawned, stretched, and went back to sleep.

* * *

>Here's chapter five. Thanks for reading and please review.

6. Chapter 6

Here's chapter six. Please read and review.

* * *

>Astrid had woke up in time to get to see her parents. Astrid mother brought down some cooked chicken and some cake. The teens hadn't seen food in two days so they devoured the food.

"Man this is good," Hiccup said in a mouth full.

"Yes well Stoick told me you two hadn't eaten in a while so I thought it would be nice to bring you chicken and cake," Mrs. Hofferson said smiling.

"Now don't eat too fast," Mr. Hofferson said, "You don't need tummy aches."

"Thanks mom," Astrid said smiling, "I love you."

"I love you too dear," Mrs. Hofferson said hugging her.

"Now, we need to go," Mr. Hofferson said, "We have to be there when Stoick tells them why you are here."

"What is he going to say," Hiccup asked his mouth covered in food.

"He's going to say that you two have picked up a really bad disease," Mrs. Hofferson said wiping Hiccups mouth, "And that you two have to stay away from other people."

"But that means we won't be able to see you anymore," Astrid said sadly.

"No," Mr. Hofferson said, "Stoick will tell them it's not contagious. But that you wish that no one comes near here until it goes away."

"That works," Hiccup said, "I guess."

"Stoick is chief and what he says goes," Mrs. Hofferson said, "They will obey him because they respect him."

"You really think that," Astrid said, "Snotlout would be over here in a flash if given the chance."

"Then we won't give Snotlout the chance now will we," Mr. Hofferson said.

"Look just don't worry," Mrs. Hofferson said, "You two have enough to worry about."

"Can I go to bed now," Astrid asked.

"It's the middle of the day, why do you want to sleep," Hiccup asked.

"I couldn't sleep last night because of your stupid doll," Astrid said yawning.

"Smiles isn't that scary," Hiccup said defensively.

"We need to go," Mrs. Hofferson said, "We'll come see you again soon."

"Sure thing," Hiccup said.

"Night," Astrid said standing up and yawning.

Astrid walked to her room while Hiccup rushed after her parents. He forgot to tell them about Toothless. Hiccup called after Mr. Hofferson and they stopped.

"I forgot to tell you about Toothless," Hiccup said panting, "You see dad said he would allow anything if it helped us."

"Okay go on," Mrs. Hofferson said.

"Toothless," Hiccup called, he turned to Mrs. Hofferson, "I kind of promised dad me and Astrid would tell you."

Toothless came bounding up to Hiccup. He sniffed the feet of Mrs. Hofferson who let out a huge wail. Mr. Hofferson grew angry.

"What kind of joke is this," He asked angrily.

"Um," Hiccup said thinking of a good excuse, "You see, he helps me and Astrid not be afraid."

"I see," Mr. Hofferson said taking his wife by the hand, "Good bye," they hastily walked up the stairs.

Hiccup watched them walk up the stairs. Toothless looked at Hiccup with a guilty look on his face. Hiccup just walked back with Toothless on his heals. A couple of times Hiccup shouted at Toothless because he stepped on his heals. He knew he messed up by showing Toothless to Astrids parents without Astrid there. Now they might want to send Astrid somewhere else. He should have made them stay and explained the dragons role better instead of saying what he said. Hiccup walked inside where Astrid was looking at him scared.

"So you know what I told them," Hiccup said breaking the silence.

"Yes," Astrid said, "We should have told them while they were here," she started to cry, "What if they send me away."

"Don't cry," Hiccup said hugging her, "You know what happens."

Meanwhile, Astrid parents made it back to the village in time to find out about Berks newest visitors. Kornak had come and none of the teen boys could keep their eyes off of the chiefs daughter. Her long black hair flowed like water, and she moved like the waves of the ocean. She seemed to glow like light cutting through water, her eyes were the color of the ocean, her hair seemed to shine blue.

"You must be Gordon," Stoick said shaking the Kornak chiefs hand.

"Yes," Gordon said, "This is my daughter Ruffnut."

"There's another girl here by that name," Stoick said smiling.

"The village is so pretty," Ruffnut said, her voice was as if the ocean itself was speaking.

"You should see it at sunset," Tuffnut said in a trance, "I'm Tuffnut."

"I'm Ruffnut," the Kornak girl said smiling.

"Is there another name I can call you," Tuffnut asked, "I have a twin sister with that name."

"Then Aqua," Ruffnut said, "I'd actually like to meet your sister."

"Sure thing," Tuffnut said, "She's at home helping mom cook dinner. She's gonna crap herself once she finds out what your name is."

"I never meet anyone with the same name as me," Aqua said as they walked to his house.

"So who else calls you Aqua," Tuffnut asked.

"My friends at North Mountain Academy," Aqua said, "They call me that because of my talent."

"So what are you a good swimmer," Tuffnut asked.

"No," Aqua said stopping at the end of the dock, "This is why."

She threw her hands up and it began to rain. Tuffnut stood in awe as the cold water splashed on his helmet and clothes. Stoick saw this.

"How does she do that," Stoick asked.

"She was born that way," Gordon said, "She goes to North Mountain Academy. The school's full of kids with magical talents."

"Really," Stoick said, "There are a couple of kids here who just got powers. I guess two balls of light struck them and then not too long after that they could freeze things."

"Oh ice powers," Gordon said smiling, "The queen of the city the school is in has ice powers too. In fact she's the one who started the school. There's kids with fire powers, water powers like my daughter, wind, vegetation, lightening. But no ice, they'd be the first if they go."

"My son is going whether he likes it or not," Stoick said, "I'm not sure about Astrids parents."

"Well then let me talk to them," Gordon said, "I'll tell them about my daughters transformation."

"Oh dad," Aqua called, "Tuffnuts taking me to meet his sister be at Stoicks house in about an hour."

"Okay sweetie," Gordon called back, "See you then."

Aqua and Tuffnut left to his house. Stoick took Gordon to Astrid house. When Tuffnut and Aqua arrived at his house, Ruffnut was standing outside.

"Whoa who are you," Ruffnut asked Aqua.

"My names Ruffnut, but call me Aqua," Aqua said smiling.

"Your name's Ruffnut too," Ruffnut exclaimed excitedly, "Cool."

"That's what your brother said," Aqua said, "So you two are twins."

"Yup," Ruffnut said, "Sometimes I wish I was an only child," her and Aqua started to walk off.

Tuffnut was sad, he could have taken her to all of his friends houses and introduced her to them. He watched them go, then Aqua stopped.

"Coming," she called.

"Sure," Tuffnut said running as fast as he could to them.

Meanwhile, Gordon was talking to Astrids parents about sending her to school.

"My daughter used to be completely afraid of her powers," Gordon explained, "She wouldn't leave her room for the longest time without at least seventeen pairs of gloves on. But when she went to North Mountain Academy, she seemed to change. She quit being so afraid and now she has a bigger circle of friends than I ever had."

"But what if it doesn't work," Mrs. Hofferson said.

"Trust me it will," Gordon said, "The queen of the city the school is in has ice powers. She runs it and even teaches a class. No children with icy powers go there, they all have water, fire, vegetation, lightening, air."

"I don't know," Mr. Hofferson said grimly, "I don't think I can let my daughter go there with Hiccup after he introduced me to that dragon of his."

"I told them I would allow anything that helps," Stoick said apologetically, "I just never thought a dragon."

"No one ever thinks of those things," Mr. Hofferson said, "But what about housing for her."

"The children sleep in dorms," Gordon said, "Their room mates depend on their ethnicity and since my daughters the one of three female vikings that go there, your daughter would most definitely share with them. The children sleep in rooms of four."

"How many boy vikings," Stoick asked quickly.

"Only two," Gordon said.

"Well them it's settled," Mrs. Hofferson said, "I want Astrid going."

"We don't have the money," Mrs. Hofferson said.

"It's quite a small price," Gordon said, "Only about," he thought for a second, "I'd say one hundred a year."

"Thousand," Mrs. Hofferson said shocked.

"No just one hundred dollars," Gordon said, "And it doesn't have to be paid in full right away. It can be paid over time. Ruffnut pays it herself with a summer job."

"Last I checked, Ruffnut didn't have powers or a job," Mrs. Hofferson said.

"My Daughter is named Ruffnut," Gordon said, "She sometimes goes by Aqua."

"Water powers," Mr. Hofferson said, "Well, I'm in."

"I guess," Mrs. Hofferson said.

"Great," Gordon said, "Where are they."

"Outside the village," Stoick said, "We sent them there after their powers were discovered. They couldn't control it."

"Well," Gordon said, "Isolation can be one of the worst things you can do."

"Oh," Mrs. Hofferson said as if it were a question.

"Elsa was isolated for thirteen years," Gordon said, "It only made her fear worse."

"I still want her to go," Mrs. Hofferson said, "Maybe she'll find her real parents."

"Your daughter's adopted," Gordon asked.

"Yes," Mr. Hofferson said, "A couple came to Berk and they had a baby. They said she was theirs but it was obvious she wasn't. They had black and brown hair and she was blonde like us. They couple got in trouble for trying to kill Vulka to take Hiccup."

"Yes," Stoick said, "I charged them with treason and sentenced them to death."

"We took her in as our little girl," Mrs. Hofferson said, "When she learned to talk she'd call me mommy. I never could tell her I wasn't mommy."

"I could never get them to tell me where they baby came from," Stoick said, "I wanted to return her."

"I would recommend telling her before she left," Gordon said, "She would hate you if she found out on her own."

"We will," Mr. Hofferson said looking at his wife.

"We'll leave you be," Stoick said, "We've got business to do. I'll get Astrid and Hiccup to come to the village to talk to," he turned to Gordon, "Should I call her by her real name or nick name."

"I really don't know," Gordon said.

"Anyway his daughter," Stoick said back to Astrid parents, "You can pull her aside and tell her."

"Will do," Mr. Hofferson said.

Stoick and Gordon left. Aqua was standing outside Stoicks house with Tuffnut and Ruffnut. Aqua saw her dad come up and she left the twins. Ruffnut started to punch Tuffnuts arm accusing him of liking Aqua.

"Hey dad," she said brightly.

"Stoick wants you to talk to Hiccup and Astrid," Gordon said, "They will be joining you at North Mountain Academy."

"Oh yay," Aqua said, "What power."

"Both are ice," Stoick said.

"Ooh they'll be the first," Aqua said, "Only the queen has ice powers there."

"Well they are outside the village," Stoick said, "I will go get them after you two settle."

"Oh no," Gordon said, "You go get them now. Remember Astrids parents have to give her the talk."

"Oh right," Stoick said, "The sooner the better."

"Yes," Gordon said.

"What's going on," Aqua asked.

"Um," Gordon said.

"You'll be told later," Stoick chimed in, "For now, you just focus on what you'll say."

"Sure thing," Aqua said gleefully.

Stoick started for the cottage in the alcove. Hiccup would be doing his thing and Astrid hers. But when he got there, Hiccup was half sitting on a rock, half laying on the ground asleep. Toothless was no where to be seen. An open notebook lay on his lap he pages covered in drawing. Hiccup didn't argue much when his father picked him up. Toothless poked his head out of some tall grass when he heard Hiccup being moved. The dragon had some grass hanging out of his mouth and seemed on the loopy side. Stoick didn't pay attention to Toothless, but took Hiccup in the house.

"Astrid," Stoick called, "Where are you."

"Here," Astrid said walking out of her room, "What's going on."

"I need you to come to the village," Stoick said, "You and Hiccup here are being sent to North Mountain Academy."

"Wait what," Astrid said starting to freak out, "You want to send us to a place full of people."

"People like you," Stoick said just as frost grew around Astrids feet, "The children that go there have powers like you."

"Really," Astrid said looking at Stoick and noticed the zonked out Hiccup in the chiefs arms.

"I came here and he was half on a rock half on the ground," Stoick said, "It's really kinda funny."

"See you there," Astrid said turning on her heels, "Goodbye now."

"Goodbye then," Stoick said leaving with Hiccup.

"You'll enjoy this school Hiccup," Stoick said, "Trust me."

Stoick walked slowly up the creaky stairs. Hiccup turned in his sleep and was about to wake up but Stoick quickly calmed him. Hiccup fell back asleep. Astrid wasn't going to be the same after her parents tell her their secret. She'll be broken.

* * *

>There you go chapter six. Thanks for reading and please review. I won't be here for a week because I'll be at church camp.

7. Chapter 7

Here's chapter seven. I hope you like it and please read and review.

* * *

>Hiccup woke up surrounded by people he didn't know. He was about to scream when his dad calmed him down.

"It's okay Hiccup," Stoick said, "There's nothing to be afraid of."

"Who are these people," Hiccup asked out of complete fear.

"Gordon," Gordon said sticking out his hand, "Chief of Kornak."

"Okay," Hiccup said turning down the hand shake, "Why am I here."

"You my son are going to North Mountain Academy," Stoick said rather cheerful.

"North Mountain Academy," Hiccup asked shocked.

"It's a school for children with powers like you," Gordon explained, "My daughter should be here soon to tell you about it."

Meanwhile, Astrid found her way to her parents. First, they told her about the school she would be going to. Then they told her everything, how she came to Berk, about how the people who had her tried to kill Hiccups mom and take Hiccup.

"I can't be adopted," Astrid sobbed, "I can't be."

"It's hard to take dear," Mr. Hofferson said.

"I'm not a Hofferson," Astrid cried quietly, "I'm not a Hofferson."

"Astrid don't cry," Mrs. Hofferson said about ready to hug her.

"No," Astrid said stepping away from the hug, "I just want to be alone."

Ruffnut and Tuffnut happened to be walking by when she came running out crying. Ruffnut's gaze followed the crying girl.

"What's up with her," Tuffnut asked.

"Something's up," Ruffnut said, "I swore I heard her tell her parents no."

"You can follow her," Tuffnut said, "Just don't talk to me when you're done talking to that back stabber."

Fine," Ruffnut said following Astrids path with her nose in the air.

Ruffnut found Astrid sitting on a rock crying her eyes out. Ruffnut sat next to her.

"What's wrong," Ruffnut asked.

"Why are you here," Astrid said angrily, "And why do you want to know what's wrong, I thought we were enemies."

"Well I got to thinking," Ruffnut said, "I really am dumb enough to marry my brother."

"You're actually saying that," Astrid said looking up at her and calming down.

"Yeah," Ruffnut said, "Me not saying that is kinda like me not going to a doctor when I am sick. It'll only get worse if I don't admit it to myself."

"You're very wise Ruffnut," Astrid commented.

"So what's wrong Astrid," Ruffnut asked.

"I found out I'm adopted," Astrid said, "I was brought to Berk by these people who tried to kill Hiccups mom to take Hiccup. Stoick charged them with treason and they were killed."

"Wow," Ruffnut said, "That's crazy."

"Yeah," Astrid said, "I just found all this out today."

"Astrid," Ruffnut asked, "I'm sorry about the way I treated you when i was told about what you said."

"I'm sorry about what I said," Astrid said knowing Ruffnut meant what she said.

The two girls hugged for the first time in days. It was the best hug either of them felt in their lives. They pulled away and Astrid turned away.

"This friendship will be cut off soon," Astrid said, "My parents are sending me away to this school."

"What school," Ruffnut asked.

"North Mountain Academy," Astrid said debating on whether or not she should tell.

"Where's that," Ruffnut said.

"A city called Arendelle," Astrid said, "Can you keep a secret," Astrid asked.

"Sure thing," Ruffnut said smiling.

"Remember the night Hiccup and I got struck by those balls of light," Astrid asked, Ruffnut nodded and she took a breath, "We found out later we were given the powers of ice and snow. That's the reason I'm going to the school."

"Really," Ruffnut said excitedly.

"Yes," Astrid said touching near by branch and freezing it , "The whole place is full of kids with powers. Hiccup's going and there's other vikings. I shouldn't get too lonely."

"I'll miss you though," Ruffnut said standing up, "Come on let's go do something besides sitting here crying all day."

"Okay," Astrid said standing up, "Race you."

"You're on," Ruffnut said running ahead.

Astrid caught up and they two were having the most fun they had in a long time. Dodging branches, jumping over rocks, turning tight corners. They ran into Snotlout who was looking for his helmet which the twins hid earlier.

"Why are you hanging out with _her_," Snotlout asked Ruffnut.

"We made up and are now friends again," Ruffnut said.

"What about all the crap she said about you," Snotlout asked, "About all of us."

"I think it's stupid that we stopped being friends with her for her being honest," Ruffnut said, "Besides, I think what she can do is kinda cool."

"What can she do," Snotlout asked tauntingly.

"I can't tell," Ruffnut said turning away, "Bye bye."

Astrid and Ruffnut raced to the chiefs house. Astrid threw the door open and ran into the chief of Kornak. Ruffnut laughed.

"Sorry," Astrid giggled.

"I see you two made up," Hiccup said smiling.

"Hey Hiccup," Astrid said, "I found out today I was adopted."

"What," Hiccup said surprised.

"And I found out the powers," Ruffnut said, "Astrid told me."

"Oh," Hiccup said glaring at Astrid.

"What," Astrid said smiling, "We made up, I had to tell her," Her and Ruffnut busted up laughing.

Aqua walked in and saw Ruffnut and Astrid laughing together.

"What's going," she asked.

"You must be Aqua," Hiccup said, "I'm Hiccup."

"I'm Astrid," Astrid said.

"Did you her name's Ruffnut too," Ruffnut told Astrid.

"Really," Hiccup said.

"Yup," Aqua said, "As soon as I found out there was another Ruffnut I told everyone to call me Aqua."

"Anyway," Astrid said, "I also found out found Ruffnut's a lot wiser than she puts on."

"I told you I am dumb enough you marry my brother," Ruffnut said.

"Be quiet or I freeze Hiccups nuts off," Astrid said smiling.

"Wait what," Hiccup said covering his junk.

Astrid and Ruffnut howled with laughter. Hiccup grumbled in anger as he stood up and went to his room.

"Anyway I should go pack," Astrid said, "Wanna help Ruffnut."

"Sure thing," Ruffnut said.

The two ran off to Astrids house. Hiccup didn't believe Ruffnut's new friendship toward Astrid was a true one. He looked at his drawers, he was going to miss Berk a lot. He looked under his bed for a basket. There wasn't one. He got up and walked downstairs to ask his dad where it was when he overheard the conversation between Gordon and Stoick.

"I don't think Ruffnut is true friends with Astrid again," Stoick said.

"Well they just met," Gordon said.

"Not your daughter," Stoick said, "That girl that showed up with Astrid."

"Oh right her," Gordon said, "I don't think Ruffnut wants to be her friend again. I think she's using Astrid."

"Me too," Stoick said, "I knew it when Ruffnut said she was dumb enough to marry her brother. It's all an act."

"It's as plain as the nose on my face," Gordon said, "Once Ruffnut tells the others what's going on who knows what will happen."

"Right," Stoick said, "But there's not really anything we can do about it except warn Astrid about it."

"True," Gordon said rubbing his chin, "What do you think Hiccup thinks about it."

"I think Hiccup will try almost anything to get Astrid from being friends with her," Stoick said, "She's the only person ever to talk to him as a friend other than me and Gobber."

"Yes," Gordon said, "I think we should just keep our mouths shut and let Hiccup do the talking."

Hiccup decided to take that moment to step out and play dumb, "About me doing what," Hiccup asked.

"Nothing," Stoick said brushing it off, "What do you need son."

"Basket," Hiccup said, "I do need to pack don't I."

"Yes," Stoick said looking to his bed room door, "In my room in the closet."

"Thanks," Hiccup said heading toward the room, "Anything else I might need Gordon."

"Toothbrush, jamies," Gordon said, "Those kinds of things."

"Thank you," Hiccup said disappearing into the room.

He shut the door. The closet was on the other side of the huge room. There were about a hundred weapons in the room. Ax's, knives, swords, a few spears here and there, decorated the room in a morbid mess. Hiccup found the closet and had to push a barrel of various weaponry off to the side to get the door to open. There was no basket there, but a box with things a woman would have. A poking out, a few dresses spilled over the side, but what brought Hiccups attention to the box was a book sticking out. This peeked his interest and he took it. He headed back to the front room just as Gordon left.

"Hey dad," Hiccup said holding up the book, "I didn't find a basket, but found this."

Stoick turned around and took the book, "I remember this old thing,"

Stoick said opening it up, dust clouded from the pages as he turned them, "This was a book of stories your mother had, she wanted to read every one of the to you."

"Really," Hiccup said trying to take a look at the old pages.

"Yup," Stoick said holding the book closer to the ground so Hiccup could see, "Vulka could never keep her nose out of this book long enough to watch where she was going. Always ran into something, "He chuckled.

"Where's that basket," Hiccup said, "It's not in the closet."

"I don't know," Stoick said, We'll just have to look for it."

"Whoever finds it first gets to pick dinner," Hiccup shouted running down the hall.

"Then get ready to have salmon patties," Stoick shouted back before disappearing into his room.

Gobber and Astrid stood juts outside the house talking.

"How long do you think before they realize Hiccup took it with him to the alcove," Gobber asked Astrid.

"I don't know," Astrid said, "But I'm not gonna tell him. How long before Ruffnut realizes I left my house."

"She's about as bright as a rock," Gobber said, "I don't think she'll notice for a while."

The clanking sound of pots falling sounded from the house and a few shouts.

Snotlout walked up from behind without either Gobber or Astrid knowing, "Heard you're leaving," he said casually.

"Holy rabies," Astrid shouted jumping a foot, "Don't do that."

"Holy rabies," Gobber asked laughing.

Snotlout was rolling on the ground laughing. Astrid grumbled and stomped away. She heard Snotlout shout a few things at her but couldn't make out what he was saying because he was laughing too hard. Astrid just went home where Ruffnut was having a cow.

"Astrid where did you go," Ruffnut asked.

"I went to talk to Hiccup but he was too busy spending time with his dad," Astrid said flipping her hair, "Besides," she said before disappearing inside her house, "I do have to marry him someday."

"Wait," Ruffnut said, "What," then remembered what Astrid told her in the woods, "Oh," she whispered quietly.

Astrid has to marry Hiccup because of their powers, Ruffnut now understood. Astrid leaned against the door and started to sob softly.

She didn't want to leave Berk, but she knew she had to. It was for the best, like Stoick letting Hiccup keep Toothless, for the better of Berk. There was a knock on the door, she stood up and wiped her tears away. She opened the door to find Hiccup with his hair black.

"What happened," she gasped.

"I had a seizure," Hiccup explained, "When I woke up, my dad was shocked and told me my hair changed."

"What," Astrid said holding her had to her mouth.

"That's not all," Hiccup said taking off his gloves, "My powers changed too."

"To what," was all Astrid could say.

"I came here as soon as I found out," Hiccup said reluctantly, "My power is now fire."

"Fire," Astrid whimpered.

"I guess I'm gonna go," Hiccup said turning around.

Astrid just quietly turned around as though she were a zombie and shut the door. She fell to the floor crying. Hiccup had never gone, he put his ear to the door and listened to his love cry. He walked home feeling dead inside for making her cry. He slowly came to his house and walked inside. Stoick saw and was about ready to say something when Hiccup pushed past and headed up the stairs to his room. Hiccup shut his door and just fell to the floor with his knees pulled to his chest. Astrids mother made her go to her room. Now she too was sitting on the floor by her door in the same position as Hiccup in his room. They felt worlds apart from each other even though they were really just a short walk away.

* * *

>Here's chapter seven I believe I literally lost track of what chapter I'm in. Anyway thank you so much for reading and please review.

8. Chapter 8

Here's chapter 8, I know I know I'm taking forever to write chapters. Anyway please read and review.

* * *

>Hiccup woke up in the morning to find his dad had packed up his clothes. Hiccup sat up and cleared his throat.

"Oh hey Hiccup," Stoick said without looking up.

"Dad," Hiccup said, "Aren't you going to ask me how that thing with Astrid went."

"No," Stoick said, "I knew it didn't go well when you came home sad."

"Oh," Hiccup said.

"You're leaving in fifteen minutes," Stoick said, "Get up, eat then get to the docks."

"Yes dad," Hiccup said, "Take my stuff for me."

"I will," Stoick said, after a pause, "Astrids parents got Toothless to the boat last night."

"Oh," Hiccup asked.

"Yes," Stoick said, "They didn't mean any harm when they left the way they did. Mrs. Hofferson was scared to death of the thing, but as soon as she realized it meant no harm they were alright with it."

"Okay," Hiccup said standing up, "What do I do."

"Get something to eat," Stoick said, "There's bacon on the front table."

"Bacon," Hiccup shouted running down the stairs.

"Don't eat share," Stoick shouted.

"What was that," Hiccup said stuffing his mouth with the crunchy treat.

"Don't eat my share," Stoick said storming down the stairs only to find it was too late.

Hiccup held the empty plate with a wide eyed look on his face. Hiccup tried to say something but his mouth was too full and Stoick just laughed. Hiccup finished choking down the rest of the bacon. After about ten minutes of having been laughed at by his father he walked off to his room. He shut the door behind him.

"Well," Hiccup said, "Either he's going to start cooking more bacon at a time or start eating his share first."

He lay down on his bed and starting thinking a lot about Astrid. Does she hate him now that he has fire powers or is she sad because of it. He thought about her till it was time to go. Stoick called him down and Hiccup did so. He walked to the docs as his father carried his stuff. Astrid was at the docks waiting.

"Why haven't you gotten on yet," Hiccup asked.

"Waiting for you," Astrid replied.

"I thought you hated me to be honest," Hiccup said relived.

"Why would I," Astrid asked.

"Ready for school," Aqua asked wearing a dress that looked like it was made out of the ocean, "If you're wondering about my dress it's because Elsa encorages us to show of our talents."

"Sweet," Astrid said hooking arms with Hiccup.

"You're acting different," Hiccup said.

"What happened," Aqua asked.

"I had a seizure and my talents changed from ice to fire," Hiccup explained boarding the ship.

"If you're powers changed since you've got them it means the magic hasn't settled," Aqua said, "They could change again."

"Really," Astrid said excitedly.

"Yeah," Aqua said, "It could take years to fully settle if you were cursed or gifted."

"How do you know if you were cursed or gifted," Hiccup asked.

"Depends on how you see your powers," Aqua said.

"Huh," Hiccup said.

Astrid let go and walked to the front of the ship. Hiccup couldn't tell how she felt about his change of power.

"One last hug before you go," Stoick asked.

"Sure thing dad," Hiccup said giving his dad a hug.

"When will we see Berk again," Astrid asked.

"December," Aqua said, "There is no school from the second week of December to the first week of January."

"See you then," Hiccup said looking up at his dad, "I'll write you as often as I can."

"I'll write you as soon as I get the first letter," Stoick said hugging him.

Gordon climbed aboard and told the men to set sail. Astrid held on for dear life as the boat lurched out into the unforgiving sea. She never got the chance to say good bye to her parents, they never showed up. Astrid leaned over the edge as the waves licked up her falling tears. Hiccups arm wrapped around her.

"Don't," Astrid said stepping away from him.

She rejected him. What did he do to make her reject him? He watched her walk away and did nothing, something he would come to regret later on. Aqua saw the whole thing from a distance, and shook her head in clicked her tongue.

"You love each other," she whispered to herself, "Our school needs a couple like you."

Ever since Aqua could remember, there was a rivalry between water and fire. There were always fights between the two talents, they'd spread rumors about each other, beat each other up. Aqua hated the fact that they hated each other, some fires would be really compatible with waters if they would just get to know each other.

Astrid was trying not to cry. Hiccup grimaced as he watched her as she sat down at the bow of the ship, why had she rejected him? What did he do to make her mad at him? The only thing he could think of that would make her mad was his power change, but he had no control over that. Thoughts of hatred for the girl of his dreams swept through his head like wind.

"Fine then," Hiccup said to himself, "See what I care."

Astrid knew what she did hurt him bad. It had been about five hours since they left Berk and she wanted to apologize. Astrid found Hiccup sitting at the opposite end of the ship. He was grumbling angrily to himself.

"Hey Hiccup," Astrid said sweetly.

"What do you want," Hiccup grunted.

"To tell you I'm sorry," Astrid said, "What I did was uncalled for."

"Yeah," Hiccup said turning away, "Why are you."

"Well you're all I got," Astrid said.

"Trust me Princess you'll make plenty more friends," Hiccup said through gritted teeth.

"I never knew you to hold a grudge this long," Astrid said, "You forgave me for what I did to you over the years. I turned down a hug from you and you can't stand to be around me. What happened."

"I just wanna know why you turned it down," Hiccup said.

"I knew it," Astrid said leaving.

"Knew what," Hiccup asked not knowing she left, "Astrid."

He turned around to find she had gone. What did she know that he didn't. He tried to find her but as small as the ship was, he couldn't. He looked up to the crows nest and knew that's where she had to be. He climbed the ropes to the top as fast as he could. He climbed over the side and found her balled up crying into her knees.

"Astrid," Hiccup said.

"Go away," Astrid said through her knees.

"What did you mean when you said you knew it," Hiccup asked sitting next to her.

"You figure it out," Astrid said swinging her legs over the side of the crows nest.

"Astrid don't go," Hiccup said.

"Goodbye Fire Boy," Astrid said insultingly.

Hiccup watched her climb down, he really ticked her off this time. What if she talks to him again. He wasn't going to allow that and chased her down.

She reached the bottom first and stormed off. Hiccup touched the bottom and caught up with her.

"Astrid what's up with you," Hiccup asked, "First I try to hug you then you turn me down and can't figure out why I'm pissed."

"It was you who kept my parents away," Astrid said starting to cry, "You showed them Toothless without me and you chased them away."

"Astrid they're the ones who snuck Toothless aboard the ship," Hiccup explained quickly, "They were scared but understood his role."

"Yeah right," Astrid grumbled storming off.

"Astrid," Hiccup said trying to make her stop.

"Enough you two," Aqua shouted from behind, "What is going on."

"He kept my parents from coming to see me," Astrid said sniffling.

"Your side," Aqua said to Hiccup.

"My dad told me that her parents snuck Toothless aboard the ship," Hiccup said trying to keep his cool.

"Astrid he's right," Aqua said, "I saw them do it."

"But why didn't they come," Astrid cried.

"They told my dad they couldn't show," Aqua said apologetically, "They gave my dad these papers. I don't know what they are for. You'd have to ask him."

Astrid broke down, had her parents really abandoned her?

* * *

>Sorry this chapter isn't very long. My fanfiction account was down a few days and I couldn't write anything. Thankfully what ever was wrong fixed itself and now I'm back in action. Thanks for reading and please review,

End
file.